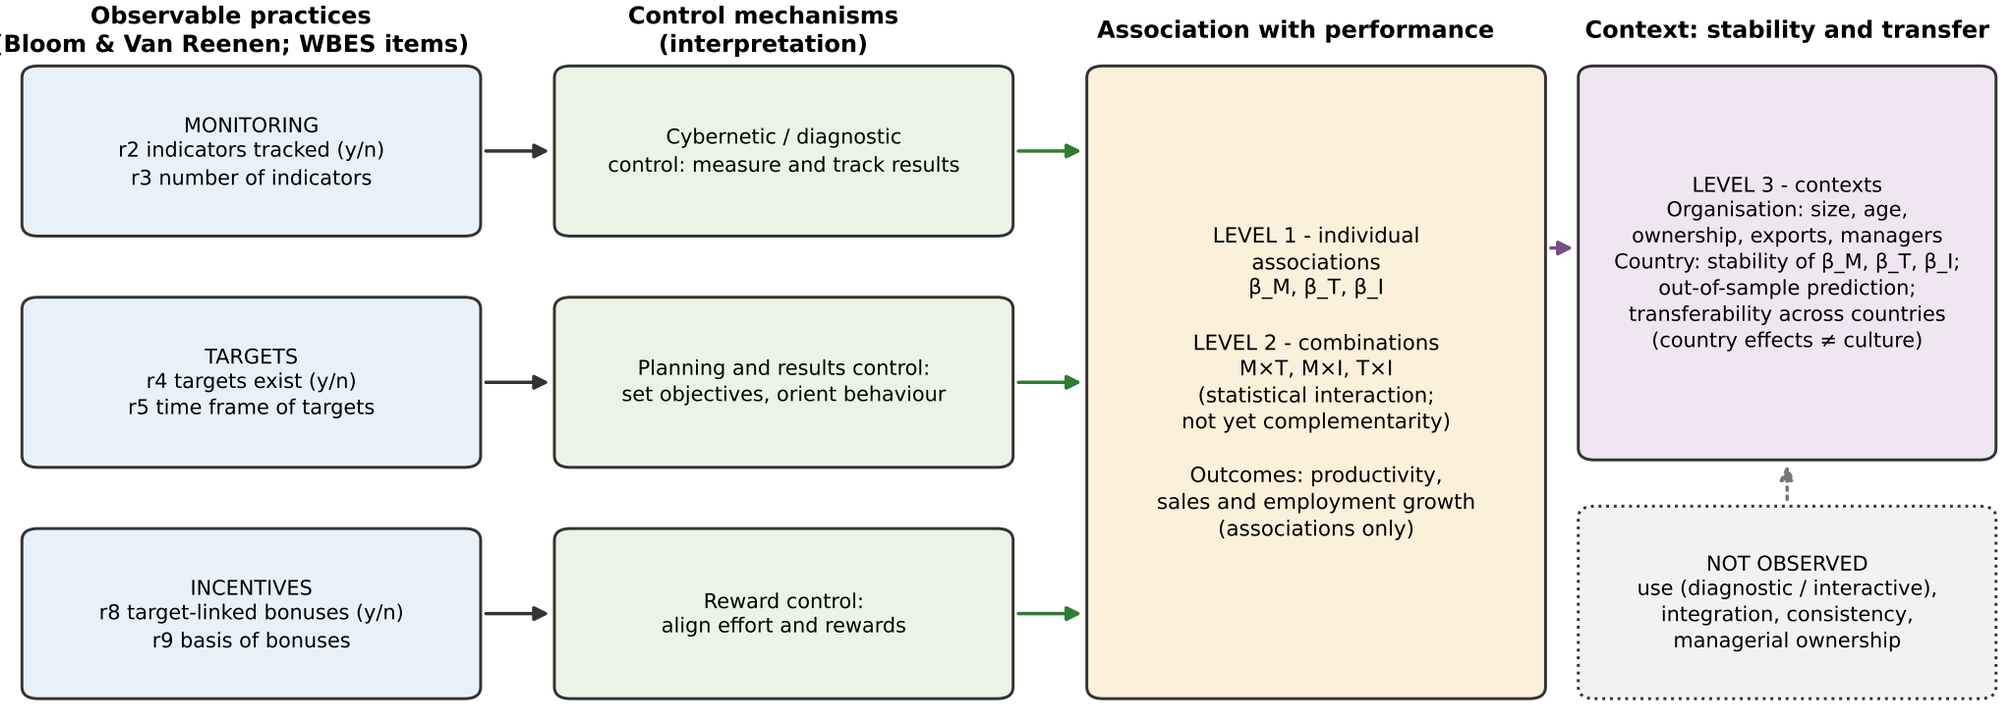
From structured management practices to control mechanisms, performance, heterogeneity and transferability

Starting point: Bloom & Van Reenen's three practice families; control-literature concepts are then used to interpret them



Mapping used for interpretation only: Bloom & Van Reenen practices are not a complete management control system (Malmi & Brown, 2008). Presence of several practices does not show that they form a coherent system (Grabner & Moers, 2013); their integration and use (Simons, 1995) would require additional variables. Solid arrows: observed or estimated; dotted: unobserved; no arrow implies causation.
